

StorySheet: EXCELLENT ENDINGS

8

Your character has worked hard and is finally ready to solve their problem. Does your character reach their goal? Or fail? As the author, you get to end your story any way you want. Think about the mood you want to end with and look back at your 'Build a Setting' StorySheet.) Now experiment with different possible endings for your story based on different moods. Once you've decided how to end your story, you will want to write a strong last sentence. A good way to do this is with a big emotion – think about how your character feels at the end of their adventure. Use this page to think about different ways you can end your story.

storystudio.ca

What mood could you use for your ending?	What details could you include? (Example: What does your character see or hear around them?)	What big emotion does your character feel at the end? (Anger, Fear, Sadness, Disgust, Surprise, Anticipation, Trust, Joy?)	How might your character react to this emotion? (Examples: Jump with joy, celebrate with a party, cry in a corner)
Happy: Sad:
Silly:
Something else?

What is the best ending for your story? Based on this, write a final sentence with BIG EMOTION here.

Date: _____ Name: _____